In the fall of '63, that rascal Vallandigham was defeated for Governor of Ohio. On 13 Sep 1863, Stephen Reider wrote a very racist letter to Willson Hutchison, a Wayne county soldier in Company E of the 120th. Reider was supporting Vallandigham for governor of Ohio and wanted Hutchison to vote for him rather than to vote for the "War Democrat" candidate, John Brough. Brough won the election. Hutchison remained in the war until he was mustered out 14 Oct 1865. Stephen Rider would have been about 17 in 1863. He was living in Wooster Twp, Wayne Co OH in 1860.

Wilson Hutchison sent that letter to the newspaper along with this message below.

From the 120th, A Copperhead Letter!! A Last Appeal to the Soldier Boy
He "can't see it."

Headquarters 120th Regiment, O.V.I., Berwick, La., Oct. 2d, 1863

Mr. E. Foreman [Editor] -Dear Sir: Please find enclosed a letter which was sent to a member of this Regiment, by a citizen of your county. The letter is altogether too ridiculous and contemptibly illiterate to influence the mind even of the most unintelligent of our Soldiers. I send the letter to you to make whatever use of it you see proper, as also to show you a little of the doctrine which some of the Northern Copperheads are trying to instil into the minds of true Soldiers, as well as a specimen of the intelligence that characterizes his supporters. The boys who read it, say "bully for the Pugh family," for the "girls in red white and blue," and for the "Big Hickory Strip of Wood!" I can assure the Butternuts of the North, that all their efforts to convert Soldiers to their Traitorous Faith, will prove futile, as our boys have seen enough of "rebellion" to convince them that our only safety, as a nation, lies in a vigorous prosecution of this war, and a united support of the Administration, and whether they will get a free pass over the Railroad or not, matters not to them so that a man is elected who is a Union man, and not a low, cowardly, sneaking TRAITOR.

Yours truly, W.
