He was earning 12 dollars a month of which he gave his mother at least six dollars. He continued to send her money from his military pay check. "Doylestown O. March 16th 1878

Harriet Brouse, being duly sworn deposed and says,

I received $2,546/45 from my father, Thomas Frederick's estate. One thousand Dollars I put on interest, calculating that my pension and the interest of that amount would keep me. I paid out of the remainder for medical attendance for a term of three years and six months, between three and four hundred dollars, the remainder I divided with my children.

3 Jun 1936 Mrs. Minnie Musser, the soldier's sister, wrote a letter to the pension office. The responded saying that the soldier's nephews or nieces were not entitled to any pension and that she would need to make other inquiries about any bounty due the soldier. She said that "Mother Musser" was the sister of Jacob BROUSE. "...he has left a lot of nieces and nephews that have been hard hit during this depression and if they are entitled to his back pay and pension it would mean a lot. Mr Brouse was a single man,"

15 Dec 1880 Harriet, age 74 and living in Doylestown, had to ask for reinstatement of her pension which had been denied because of supposed "false statements."
